Later the stranger and Miss Maude were found conversing together, and the supposition is that the arrangements were made at that time for the elopement. After the dinner hour Miss Maude informed her mother that she was going to visit a neighbor during the afternoon, and would not return until after supper. Instead, however, ale went to the Union depot, where she was joined by Professor Williams, and the lovers took the westbound train for Warrensburg.

Republican papers in Kansas are reading Ingalls out of the party be cause of the views he holds on the silver question. The same fight is being waged on Chief Justice Martiu, an outspoken advocate of free coinage at 16 to 1. Chairman Cy Lelaud's home organ, Sol Miller's Troy Chief, says of Ingalis and Martin: "Last week the Atchison county Republican convention was held which indorsed John J. Ingalls for United States Senator and the renomination of Chief Justice Martin. A resolution was then offered indorsing the St. Louis platform, but it was tabled by a large majority. Here was an indorsement for two men for the best offices in the gift of the party, and yet the convention did not have the courage or the honesty to indorse the platform of the party. It was simply a subordination of party principle and party courage to the ambition of two men who are asking the party for office while they repudiate one of the leading principles of the party. Judge Martin has long been regarded as a calamityite, with but little sentiment in common with the Republican party. The antics of Senator Ingalls for the last six years are well known, and his correspondence from the St. Louis term thereof, and on the 15th day of P. 1808, I, John T.
